FALL CAR CARE | CLEANING

Protecting the Exterior

Sun, stray rocks and birds are always a threat to your vehicle's exterior.

Autumn and the coming winter months may provide still others, from falling debris to road salt. Here's how to keep your vehicle's paint job vibrant and glossy.

REGULAR CLEANING

Regularly wash your car, ideally once a week, even into the winter months. If possible, avoid washing your car in direct sunlight. Start by removing dirt and dust by rinsing it with water or a soft, clean cloth. This will reduce the risk of scratches on your paint.

Use a car-specific cleaner with the cloth. Avoid using dish detergent or other cleaners that may contain chemicals that are harmful to your car's finish. Treat stubborn mud, accumulated road salts and bird droppings with an automotive spray bar. Thoroughly rinse the car to remove any soapy residue, then dry it with a microfiber towel or a clean cotton rag to prevent water stains and any other potential damage.

AFTER THE WASH

Next, apply wax or a sealant to maintain the appearance of your car. This provides a protective layer against harsh elements such as the sun, bugs and bird droppings. To ensure optimal results, wax the car every six weeks after thoroughly cleaning it. Just be aware that small pieces of dirt and debris can potentially cause damage to the clear coat if trapped within the wax.

Paint sealants may offer superior performance compared to wax. If applied correctly, they give your vehicle an even brighter appearance — though they may accentuate existing paint imperfections, swirls or scratches. Seal your car's paint job every six months. For the best results, carefully follow all application instructions from the manufacturer.

WHERE TO PARK

When parking your car, choose shaded areas whenever possible. Additionally, if you have the option, park your vehicle in a garage or a designated car shelter at home. This prevents the paint from fading and shields your car from the outdoors' damaging effects. In situations where covered parking is not available, it may be smart to invest in a high-quality car cover. When making your selection, ensure that the cover snugly fits your vehicle and that it's both water-resistant and breathable.

FALL CAR CARE | MAJOR SYSTEMS

Fall and Your Tires

Your tires will take a beating in the rainy and snowy conditions of winter.

Take this opportunity to inspect and potentially replace them, ensuring the safety of your car or truck and passengers inside as the seasons change. When properly maintained, your tires will help improve your fuel efficiency while providing more traction in challenging conditions.

It's important to check your tire pressure on a regular basis. Do this once a month, when the tires are cold. Under-inflated or over-inflated tires can make it harder to steer and brake, potentially leading to a traffic accident. At the same time, driving on improperly inflated tires can result in unnecessary fuel consumption.

Look for the recommended tire pressure on the vehicle information placard located on the inside of the driver's side front or back door, on the tire itself or in your owner's manual. In some cases, the number on the side of the tire represents the maximum tire pressure, not the recommended pressure.

ROTATION AND ALIGNMENT

In addition to monitoring tire pressure, regularly rotate and align your tires. Typically, tire rotation should be done every 6,000 miles. Re-align them every 15,000 miles or so.

For specific instructions regarding your vehicle, refer to your owner's manual. By rotating your tires, you ensure even wear. Proper alignment helps extend the life of the tire.

Colder months can be hard on road surfaces. Have your alignment checked if you hit an obstacle such as a curb, pothole or rough railroad crossing. Have your tires balanced every time you rotate them or when you change tires or wheels.

LOOKING THEM OVER

When inspecting your tires, check the tread and examine the tire for any cracks, protruding objects or bulges. A nail that is embedded in the tread may not immediately cause a leak, but it could result in a dangerous future blowout. That's why it's so crucial to have professionals inspect and repair any punctures or defects as quickly as possible.

When replacing your tires, avoid mixing and matching tires as this can lead to sub-par performance because of uneven tread wear. It may even lead to mechanical problems.

Fall Means Changes in Fuel

Did you know that your fuel shifts with the weather? As temperatures cool in the fall, refiners adjust their gasoline production from summer to winter blends.

THE BLENDING PROCESS

Blending is necessary to ensure optimal engine performance amid changing weather conditions. One key factor that distinguishes summer and winter-blend gasoline is the Reid Vapor Pressure reading. This measures the fuel's evaporation rate at higher temperatures. Winter-blend gas boasts a higher RVP to prevent engine issues in colder temperatures. To boost vapor pressure numbers, winter gasoline is typically mixed with butane.

DIFFERENCES BY SEASON

Federal regulations actually prohibit the use of high Reid Vapor Pressure gas during the summer months, citing its contributions to increased air pollution and emissions. From June 1 to Sept. 15 each year, fuel with an RVP greater than nine cannot be sold. To comply with these regulations, refiners resort to costlier additives, and this extends the blending process. That's often why gas prices rise in the summer.

Certain areas designated as high ozone areas by the Environmental Protection Agency may also have lower RVP requirements, even as small as seven. In emergency situations, the federal government may temporarily relax these rules. This allows retailers to sell winter-blend gas even during the summer.

INSIDE THE RULES

State regulations vary across America, with some states passing lower RVP standards in the summer. For example, California has set the RVP limit at seven and requires refiners to switch to summer-blend gas between April 1 and Oct. 31. Other states may mandate different gasoline formulations to decrease carbon monoxide levels.

Despite these variations, the transition from summer to winter gas is typically seamless in terms of how your vehicle drives. The only noticeable fluctuation may be in pricing as the seasons change. Refiners and retailers say they work together to manage these cost and performance issues.

ETHANOL VARIATIONS

Ethanol is present in 97 percent of all gas as an additive. In states where up to 10 percent ethanol (E10) is allowed, gasoline can meet the summer-blend maximum RVP of nine – even if its RVP is 10. Some states do not permit this exception, however, and this results in a broad range of gasoline regulations and prices throughout the year.
