Employment barometer

The Labor Department issues its monthly tally of hiring by nonfarm U.S. employers today.

Economists predict employers added 200,000 jobs in November. That would be the lowest monthly increase since December 2020, when the economy lost 115,000 jobs. In October, employers added 261,000 jobs, a solid gain that reflects an economy that remains resilient despite rising interest rates and painful inflation.

Mixed results?

Wall Street expects that Cracker Barrel Old Country Stores' latest quarterly report card will show mixed results.

Analysts predict the Tennessee-based eatery's fiscal first-quarter earnings declined compared to the same period last year, even as revenue increased. The company posted improved earnings and revenue in the 12 months that ended in July. Investors will be listening for an update on sales and traffic trends in the current quarter.

Oil and gas tracker

Oilfield services company Baker Hughes delivers its weekly tally of U.S. oil and natural gas rigs today.

Last week, the number of rigs rose to 784. That tally included 627 rigs exploring for oil and 155 seeking natural gas. The number of active rigs has mostly risen this year amid stronger demand and supply constraints on energy exports from Russia, which has been sanctioned over its invasion of Ukraine.

The right winter tires

Even though annual snowfall is measured in feet rather than inches for much of the northern and western U.S., not many people are buying winter tires.

From 2017 through 2021, manufacturers shipped around 4 million snow tires to distributors and retailers each year. Snow tires make up about 2% of the U.S. replacement tire market, according to Tire Business magazine.

Ryan Pszczolkowski, tire program manager for Consumer Reports, says many drivers are using "all season" and "all weather" tires rather than snow tires. All seasons perform well year round and are OK in snow. All weather does better in snow. The tread stays pliable in the cold for better grip. Neither is as good as winter tires, with tread designed for traction and rubber that stays soft in extreme cold. They stop and steer better in snow, but can't be used all year.

Snow and all weather tires have a "3 peak mountain snowflake" symbol on the sidewall, meaning they meet industry snow traction standards.

Tire choices should be based on where and when you drive. Pszczolkowski recommends winter tires in snowy areas if you must travel in storms. All weather or all seasons may work if you can wait for plows.

Which ones? Snow tires make up only a tiny portion of most of the replacement tires sold. "All weather" and "all season" tires are OK in snow, but can be used year round.

Company Spotlight Another 'L' for Lands' End

Lands' End had its biggest single-day decline since the pandemic plunge of March 2020 after the home and fashion brand surprised investors with another loss as sales fell for the third straight quarter.

Analysts were expecting a modest 6 cents per-share profit in the third quarter, but were let down when Wisconsin-based Lands' End posted a 14 cents per-share loss, citing lower demand resulting from "macroeconomic challenges."

It was also Lands' End's third straight quarterly loss, and the company now projects a per-share loss between 18 cents and 27 cents for the full year. That's well below the company's previous per-share profit guidance of between 49 cents and 70 cents. Analysts were expecting full-year profit of 58 cents per share.

Lands' End shares have lost more than half their value in 2022.
